Rewriting the Pre-History of America: New Evidence of Early Explorers

- * Has a Smithsonian photographer discovered an ancient city in the Grand Canyon?
- * Did the Vikings beat Columbus to the New World by using a fiber-optic instrument?
- * Who built a colossal reservoir in Iowa long before the first Europeans arrived?
- * What secrets have the Giants of the California Desert preserved for a thousand years?

San Francisco, CA (Sept. 15, 2008) — Eminent scientists, scholars and researchers answer these and many other intriguing questions in Unearthing Ancient America: The Lost Sagas of Conquerors, Castaways and Scoundrels. The 37 essays and articles by 22 contributors were compiled and edited by Frank Joseph, author of The Atlantis Encyclopedia and a dozen other books on history, prehistory, and metaphysics (Joseph has been editor-in-chief of Ancient American magazine since its first issue).

Turning the pages of Unearthing Ancient America, readers will dive into the “Indiana Jones”-style stories and newly unearthed evidence that documents the impact on our continent by visitors who arrived here centuries and even eons before the discovery of America. Among the dramatic finds are Vikings in Minnesota, Templars in Newfoundland, Roman coins off New Jersey’s shores, pre-Columbian connections, Inca skeletons and many more. Recent excavations and advances in technology—from DNA to ground-penetration radar—have brought to light a treasure chest of compelling revelations from such experts as:

David Hatcher Childress, founder, The World Explorers Club
John White, president of the Midwest Epigraphic Society
Dr. Masaaki Kimura, world-famous geologist, University of the Ryukyus
Gunnar Thompson, maritime historian, author, American Discovery
William Donato, leading archeological authority on the “Bimini Road”

Unearthing Ancient America does nothing less than rewrite the prehistory of North America.
