Believing in God and Science, Einstein and Religion

“. . . provocative, sometimes entertainingly whimsical, mind-stretching and logically solid. . . one of those rare books that gives serious food for thought.”

Professor Owen Gingerich, Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics

“Neither science nor theology can consider itself informed without taking into account Haisch’s views.”

Larry Dossey, MD, author of Healing Words

San Francisco, CA (May 1, 2010) — By a prominent astrophysicist, editor and author, The Purpose-Guided Universe: Believing in Einstein, Darwin, and God is a new book that declares 21st century science, the Big Bang and evolution as entirely consistent with the concept of intelligence behind the Universe. One can believe in both God and science.

The author, Bernard Haisch, Ph.D., bases his recent discoveries on the numerous coincidences and fine-tunings of the laws of nature that seem extraordinarily unlikely—thereby calling for a more rational concept of God. He advocates the serious scientific study of phenomena outside the traditional scope of science, reconciling modern scientific belief with traditional religious belief.

Dr. Haisch was a Scientific Editor of the Astrophysical Journal and Deputy Director of the Center for Extreme Ultraviolet Astrophysics at U.C. Berkeley. He was also a visiting scientist at the Max-Planck Institute for Extraterrestrische Physik in Germany, and Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Scientific Exploration.

He has published more than 100 research papers, many in prestigious journals such as Nature, Science, Physical Review, Astrophysical Journal, and Annalen der Physik. And, he has also been published in Science and Spirit and the Journal of Noetic Sciences, a parapsychological journal that “sponsors leading-edge research into the potentials and powers of consciousness.” Haisch is also the author of the best-selling book The God Theory.

Haisch said: “. . . you can, and should, be a rational, science-believing human being and at the same time know that you are also an immortal spiritual being, a spark of God. I propose a worldview that offers a way out of the hate and fear-driven violence engulfing the planet.”
