In a newly released book, Philip Coppens, one of the faces of the popular History Channel Ancient Aliens series, has summarized the best evidence that ET was here in ancient times. He shows, using anthropological rather than the traditional archaeological evidence, that there is substantial evidence that we have indeed been contacted by non-human intelligences in the past, and that they have guided us on our path of civilization.

In “The Ancient Alien Question”, Philip Coppens notes that the question is often whether ET has come here in ancient times. But scientific evidence has proven that life itself is of non-terrestrial origins. He quotes leading scientists that reveal that science is boycotting their findings to be published, so that the consensus view on the origins of life remains. But for how much longer?

The notion that we have been contacted by extra-terrestrial beings in the past is the theme of dozens of movies and television series. The History Channel’s Ancient Aliens is its most popular series. Now, Philip Coppens states that despite public interest, science is unwilling to address the question and whatever evidence is found in favor of it, is either argued away or the goalposts are moved.
