

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

NANCY DU TERTRE, known as “The Skeptical Psychic™,” is on the cutting edge of the growing spiritual movement in the United States. She is one of the new breed of psychic mediums in America today. As an attorney, specialized in securities litigation, she embraces a healthy skepticism and loves evidence. She was not born with her psychic and mediumship gifts – she learned them! Moreover, she believes anyone can become psychic with proper discipline and training. She has devoted her career in the paranormal to teaching skeptics why psychic ability is real in terms of neuroscience and psychology – and they don’t have to compromise any of their skeptical values!

Nancy is a trained psychic detective and works with law enforcement and victims’ families on missing persons/homicide cases around the country. Nancy was apprenticed for over a decade with a famous psychic detective in New Jersey, and also works with a former New Jersey police officer on private cases. Nancy is also a spiritual medium, medical intuitive and energy healer, having trained with many British, American, and Russian experts in these areas, and gives private readings to clients worldwide. Nancy is a serious paranormal investigator, and has participated with paranormal teams all around the country, and is a frequent guest lecturer at paranormal and psychic conventions. She is the founder of the New York City & New Jersey Skeptical Psychics Societies and teaches regular workshops in the tri-state area. Nancy also lectures about psychic intuition to psychology students at universities (e.g. New York University, Pace University, Montclair State University, Hofstra University). Nancy also trained for more than 10 years and is certified in Intuitive Gestalt Psychotherapy dialoguing from the SomaPsyche Institute in New York.

Nancy hosts a regular weekly Friday night radio show called “Hot Leads Cold Cases” on CBS and Para-X Radios in which she interviews fascinating guests from many different professions (e.g. homicide detectives, astrophysicists, neuroscientists, spiritual mediums, mentalists, submarine commanders, audio engineers, paranormal investigators, biologists) about how they use their analytic and intuitive skills to investigate mysteries.

No stranger to publicity, Nancy has been a frequent guest on broadcast/internet radio programs, and also television. She offered expert commentary on the paranormal in the Sundance Television Channel's "Love/Lust & the Paranormal" and was in "Mystery Hunters" on Canadian television. Nancy was previously a regular weekly guest on the KAHN News, Sacramento, CA, making predictions about politics, economics and weather. Nancy has also written other books - an art history book considered authoritative entitled "The Art of the Limoges Box" (Harry N. Abrams Co., 2003) and co-wrote the memoirs of a NYC homicide detective entitled "Behind Criminal Minds" (2011).

Nancy graduated magna cum laude from Princeton University with a prize for best thesis. She later received her JD degree with honors from Pace University School of Law, where she was a published member of the Law Review and editor of the law school newspaper. Nancy has been the publisher of an award-winning newspaper specialized in the health care industry, owner of a small printing company, co-owner of a 242-bed skilled nursing home in Brooklyn, and managed the U.S. operations of the largest manufacturer of porcelain giftware in Limoges, France. As an attorney, she practiced securities litigation with a NYC law firm for nearly a decade.

Nancy is married to Patrick du Tertre, an aristocrat from the second-oldest family in France, and they have two children. Nancy also managed her young daughter's early acting career. Her daughter appeared in roles opposite Leonardo Dicaprio in Spielberg's "Catch Me if You Can" and Sean Penn in Clint Eastwood's "Mystic River."
