How to Talk to an Alien

By Nancy du Tertre

1. A Pragmatic Response to a National Security Issue of Aliens: Let's Learn How to Talk to Aliens Before Shooting Them!

With so many documented cases and eye-witness testimony of military, intelligence and other reliable witnesses of UFOs invading our military and commercial airspace, shutting down our nuclear power plants and air missile defense systems, and abducting our citizens, it is hard to imagine that the issue of aliens and UFOs is not a matter of national security. In fact, various government programs, including Project Bluebook, were specifically designed to cover-up and disguise the true nature of this potential threat to our nation. Assuming this is a matter of national security, isn't it all the more important to learn how to communicate with these "invaders" and to understand their true intentions? "How to Talk to an Alien" is a book that opens the door to unlocking the mysteries to alien language in an attempt to understand who they are and what their interest is in visiting our planet.

2. Exolinguistics: The Newest Field in Ufology Today!

Much has been written about the field of ufology over the last century. Most of the research has centered on photographic evidence and eye-witness testimony. The military has been meticulous about sealing off crash sites and protecting physical evidence and alien casualties, leaving ufologists to speculate about the true nature of UFOs and aliens. "How to Talk to an Alien" reveals a brand new avenue in ufology for studying the alien presence on planet earth. This new field is called "Exolinguistics," a term coined by the author to embody the study of languages spoken by aliens. The author, Nancy du Tertre, examines case histories from around the world in an attempt to understand alien vocabulary and syntax of spoken and written alien languages.

3. Are Aliens Coming Back to Earth After Thousands of Years: Language As a Clue About Ancient Astronauts!

In recent years there have been many TV shows geared toward exploring the reality of ancient alien visitations on earth for thousands of years and the possibility that aliens may have introduced advanced technologies enabling humans to build phenomenal structure like the Egyptian and Mayan pyramids. These shows have focused primarily on ancient architecture and physical artifacts to support this theory. "How to Talk to an Alien" brings a brand new element to this argument. Using case histories from around the world to explore examples of alien speech, the author, Nancy du Tertre, investigates the possibility that aliens may in fact be speaking alien languages that originate or are based upon ancient and dead languages of humans, including Sumerian (3,000 BC), Archaic Egyptian (2,600 BC) and Proto-Hebrew (900 BC). This may lend support to the theory of the Ancient Astronauts.
